As an employer, we know that good nutrition is a key driver for both healthy lives and healthy businesses – and to create a better world.

Yet, in our world today, one in three people worldwide suffers from malnutrition, making it a massive global concern impacting individuals, businesses and economies alike.

But we also know that to have an impact we, as leading employers, must come together with experts in the field of nutrition, advocates for the Sustainable Development Goals, and others to address malnutrition.

For this reason, I am pleased to represent my company/organisation in becoming an official Signatory of the Workforce Nutrition Alliance – and to commit to the values of its Manifesto and to key deliverables and performance indicators established by the Alliance.

Our company/organisation is making this commitment because we know that nutrition is key to healthy lives, and that most of us will spend one-third of our adult lives at work. By leveraging the “workplace” as a connector to people, we can support the Workforce Nutrition Alliance to bring access to and knowledge about healthy nutrition to millions of people globally through workforce nutrition programmes.

Our company believes that investing in workforce nutrition programmes is a clear win-win for both our employees and our company/organization.

We are committed to working with the Workforce Nutrition Alliance, and to use the tools, resources and implementation support available through it, where relevant, to enhance our workforce nutrition programme, and to strive to influence that of our suppliers. This includes carrying out the Alliance’s workforce nutrition programme self-assessment process, which will support us in identifying opportunities for enhancement.∗

Our approach will align with that of the Alliance’s four pillars of a healthy, game-changing workforce nutrition programme:

- Healthy food at work
- Nutrition education
- Nutrition focused health checks
- Breastfeeding support

We believe that these pillars of healthy nutrition are essential to driving inclusive, productive and sustainable economies – and achievement of the Sustainable Development Goals. For this reason, whether our company works across developed or developing countries, we will prioritise the most vulnerable of our employees, and we will ensure that women are a key beneficiary of our enhanced workforce nutrition programme.

We look forward to collaborating with the Workforce Nutrition Alliance and its partners – to bring healthy nutrition to everyone, wherever there is a workplace.
